VBIA Member Spotlight: Habitech Systems

HabiTech Systems, a GE Home Technologies authorized integrator, is pleased to introduce itself as the most powerful low voltage integration company in Northeast Florida. Over the years, HabiTech has come to realize that today's sophisticated new homeowners and homebuyers expect more; more quality, more convenience, and more choices. HabiTech provides all of the latest electronic technologies: security, structured wiring, home network, multi-room audio, home theater, total home control, central vacuum, and more.

HabiTech is proud to offer our customers some of the most advanced and reliable home security equipment available today. As the home security market has evolved, we have seen a tremendous amount of demand from homeowners who want to stay in touch and in control. Whether from around the corner or around the world, consumers want to stay connected with their homes. One of the most popular and requested add-ons we see to our basic security system is the integration of cellular interactive technology.

We believe this cellular back-up and interactive service proves to be one of the best items to add onto your home security. Powered by alarm.com, these cellular communicators provide our customers with a smart security solution to monitor, protect and automate their home. Advancements in cellular networks and technology has allowed this type of solution to become one of the most common and secure ways to monitor your system. Homeowners can rely on a constant connection to our monitoring stations along with real-time alerts and remote control from a mobile app. With future system scalability in mind, additional equipment can be added for even further control and automation of items like lights, locks, thermostats, garage doors and HD video cameras. We pride ourselves in staying ahead of the technology curve and are excited to offer our customers with solutions that not only make them smile, but also make them safe.
